

3000 To Assault Timp

The warmup for the trek up the mighty Timpanogos gets under way this afternoon at 1:30 with an old fashioned watermelon eat on the lawn north of the fieldhouse, followed by the trip to Aspen Grove's amphitheatre this evening where the traditional colorful retelling of the "Legend of Timpanogos" will get its usual dramatic presentation.

Early tomorrow some 3,000 enthusiastic hikers, representing almost every state in the union, will take the trail, which leads to the summit of mighty Timp. Those who don't reach the top may stop in the comfort of Emerald Lake Shelter at the 10,500 foot altitude, which has a view of distant Wyoming. The 19x22-foot, concrete and steel shelter got its official dedication during the hike.

ISRAEL HEATON of the Recreation Department, who is in charge of the Timpanogos event, estimates that 2,000 will reach the summit, while another 1,000 will only reach the base.

The beautiful Utahna was climbing Timpanogos to sacrifice herself as a propitiation to the gods, since her people were in the throes of a severe drought and famine.

Red Eagle, an Indian brave, overtook Utahna before she reached the summit of the mountain.

Utahna mistook Red Eagle for a mountain god and allowed herself to be persuaded not to sacrifice herself. Then the legend has it that the two dwelt in Timpanogos Cave.

Later Red Eagle was seriously wounded and left his secret be known in his delirium.

UTAHNA, then realizing that she still must make the propitiation, ascended lofty Timpanogos and sacrificed herself.

According to the legend, the hearts of the two courageous young Indians are merged in stone beside a crystal lakelet in the cavern of Timpanogos.

A former Brigham Young University faculty member, the late E. L. (Gene) Roberts, is given credit for initiating the first hike up Timpanogos in 1912.

Dr. C. F. Larson Creates Religious Poetic Drama

"How did I come to write 'The Mantle of the Prophet'?" I've had the central idea in mind for 20 years," So spoke Dr. Clinton F. Larson, author of the poetic drama to be presented next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 8:15 p.m. in the Arena Theatre at BYU.

"When we come is a mission from home—Home where we scan the mountain."

"These lines contain the central idea of the play," added Dr. Larson. "When I came home to Salt Lake Valley from a mission to England and New England, I knew how Brigham Young felt about coming West to the mountains. I felt a strong anticipation of coming home," he said.

The play, written in blank verse a form rarely used in drama, is now in rehearsal under the direction of Dr. Leel J. Woodbury, associate professor of speech at BYU.

Dr. Larson, associate professor of English at BYU, is also a well-known poet. He is president of the National Federation of State Poetry Societies. He is managing editor of "BYU Studies," a magazine published for the recognition of scholars of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A native Utahn, Dr. Larson received his bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees at the University of Utah, and his Ph.D. at the University of Denver.

"When I write a play, I formulate the speeches in mind. Then, when I sit down to write, the play comes quickly."

Be Free - Wilkinson Orator To Speak

Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson, president of Brigham Young University told the student body in an address Tuesday that the most important temporal question before the American nation is whether we are worthy of remaining as a free people.

"AS I SEE IT, the decisive problem of our time is whether in the midst of worldly wealth, with our reliance upon military might, and the temptations of an age that is preoccupied with materialism, we can still retain our sense of individual responsibility, our humility and appreciation of the things of the spirit. Are we still willing to work out our own economic and spiritual salvation by the sweat of our own brows, or are we so complacent, so soft, or lacking in industry and hard work, so willing to turn over our responsibilities to government, that we are no longer worthy of being a free people?"

SOME of the individual and national sins which indicate that the American people have lost their moorings are sins of immorality; increasing juvenile delinquency, climbing divorce rate, growing crime rate, and the growing of Americans to condemn dishonest practices in others while engaging in questionable practices of their own.

The factor lies wholly in ourselves, and in the sort of shallow materialistic society we have built for our country.

Assembly fare for next week includes Prof. Mae Flegg of Montreal, Canada, Tuesday, and Gustave O. Larson, Assistant professor of church history and philosophy, Thursday.

Prof. Flegg will have as her theme, "Creativity Through Verse Speaking," while Prof. Larson will talk on Utah pioneers, in observance of Utah's pioneer day.

Miss Flegg arrived in Provo Thursday from Montreal. She will teach two classes the second term, Program Building and Lecture Reading and Storytelling, for the department of speech and dramatic arts.

MISS FLEGG was born and educated in England. She was awarded the Licentiate of the Royal Academy of Music Diploma in speech and drama.

She completed successfully in the Shakespearean festivals while in England.

Since moving to Canada five years ago she has taught drama for the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal and Verse Production for the Montreal Repertory Theatre School. She has acted with the Montreal Repertory Theatre and for the National Film Board. She has also assisted in the formation of a Little Theatre Group and has been active in church theatricals both directing and acting.

Prof. Larson is the author of several books on Utah history.

The Story of . . .

Student Guide, Topper

The Leonard Roland Wells family on campus bouts a third member, an intelligent, seal-slick Labrador retriever, Topper, who is the eyes for Wells, a junior student majoring in education.

Wells, of South Carolina, is blind. A convert to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, he has been at the Brigham Young University the past few years. He found it wasn't too difficult to get around the campus after he made a few friends, but it was almost impossible to get around town by himself.

Then he learned of Guide Dogs for the Blind, San Rafael, Calif., a charitable organization maintained by public donation and made application for a dog and the training.

Last April, Wells arrived in San Rafael for a month of intensive training for his dog. "For the first week I studied harness training with a trainer, who placed the dog harness on himself and led me around until I learned the necessary commands and techniques. Then I was given Topper, who had been previously educated. We underwent a period of getting to know each other and were trained together," Wells said.

Wells and Topper visited and worked in the California Red Wood forest. Topper never left Wells' side over the Golden Gate Bridge, down town San Rafael, and finally through the business section of San Francisco before they ended their training and returned to Provo.

Topper is about two feet high at his muscled shoulders with a shiny black coat and intelligent eyes which seem to understand all that goes on around him. He lies at Wells' feet during class periods and wears a specially constructed harness complete with a leash and hand controls.

"He's a working dog, and loves to eat. He's well behaved with the only bad habit of scattering trash over the apartment, so I'll have to do some training on that score," said Wells with a grin.

Wells, after graduation, hopes to teach in a school for the blind. He met his wife, the former Virginia Butler of Canada, at BYU. They were married over a year ago and are expecting their first child in two weeks.

Comes the first night — the moment of truth:

"Hey, where's the TV here? I see that thing on the roof." We remind him gently that we had agreed, "Don't you remember that we'd do without it this summer?"

No dice . . . "Hucome someone got a TV? Why can't WE get one? Hucome, huh?"

We quiet him down with promises of a forest of licorice whips, pink popcorn, mome climbs to the "Y".

He hits his bed. He stirs at 3:30 a.m. His right hand reaches out blindly. He flexes his little wrist, twists it gently. His eyes sparkle as he envisions a real, swinging tent pattern on, if he's in luck, a way out farm report.

THEN HE WAKES! EVERY MORNING, HE WAKES!

"Hey, Dad! You know what we're missin', Dad?"

"Lawman, Chester, Sugarfoot, Yogi Bear — whole buncha stuff!"

At this writing Lyndon Johnson still has an outside chance of becoming the Democratic Presidential nominee. I mention this only because if LBJ does carry the democratic banner in the coming election the world of music will feel the impact. Seems that Johnson's campaign managers have received permission from Jules Styne to make a campaign song out of one of the selections from the current Broadway hit "Gypsy." You guessed it. "Everthings Coming up John, son."

THE OFTEN used and little defined term "Standards" receives some enlightenment via two recent Capitol album titled "Broadway Cavalcade, Volumes 1 and 2," featuring Fred Wearing and the Pennsylvanians. Selections in the albums might properly be described as "standards." All of the tunes are familiar today even though some date back as far as 1921. And most of them are included in the repertoire of many of our modern artists. This musical longevity is, itself, a pretty good definition of a Standard Tune. But the final test comes when the original arrangement can command the attention today it did yesterday or yesteryear.

IN THE CASE of the Broadway Cavalcade albums Fred Waring tells us that the arrangements . . . "Regardless of the period in which they were originally made . . . were not burdened without chance." Listening to the music in these albums one gets the impression that these same arrangements will still be beautifully listenable 10 or 20 years from now just as they were 10 or 20 years ago. To me this is the true test of a "Standard."

It was bound to happen. The perfect combination. A western private eye with jazz background music. Shotgun Slade yet.

SIZING UP THE SINGERS: Nat "King" Cole and Stan Kenton get together for a new 45 RPM disc called "Steady." The record has a flipside but it's kind of disappointing. I view of the talent involved. Johnny Mathis has a new single on side is the beautiful "Maria" from the West Side Story first released in his "Faithfully" album. The flip side is a tuneless little ditty called "Hey Love." Doris Day is on "The Blues Train" for Columbia and Johnny Ray has brought out the crying tune again for a little number titled "Don't Leave Me Now." Instrumentally, the Jo Jones Trio has what is something of a rarity in the basic business, a jazz single. The title is "Little Suite" parts 1 & 2. Billy Vaughn, in a rare moment of artistic expression has recorded "Look For Star" a rather happy tune from a rather unhappy movie picture called "Circus of Horrors." A preview of the new Stan Kenton album is also available on single . . . "The Th is Gone" and "Ill Wind" both from the new "Standards Silhouette" package.

SONGS FOR POLITICIANS

Since the politicians will undoubtedly come up with some bright new campaign slogan, here are some suggestions:

how about, "This Could Be Start of Something" for Jack Kennedy, "Dance Only With Me" for Dick Nixon, "Come Me, Bend to Me" for Harry Truman, "Don't Fence Me In" for Lyndon B. Johnson, "I Got Along Without You Very Well" for Nelson Rockefeller, "I Can't Say No," Adlai Stevenson, "Anything You Can Do I Can Do Better" for both parties.

Summer Sad With No T.V.

by Chuck Crowsdill

We're a family of Carroll Hallers this summer.

And, believe us, we've listened to more than a few holes lately, because . . .

WE LEFT OUR TV SET BACK HOME IN TACOMA! Togetherness . . . that'll be our way of life this summer; we said, as we left for BYU.

We'll just chuck the channel-chatter. Struggle along and deny ourselves the awesome sight of revolving stations guilty of you-know-what . . .

Instead, we'll improve the children's minds with nightly discussion periods, story hours, reports on daily activities, and finally shove 'em in the sack . . .

We'll play together, stay together, and all that jazz . . .

MAN, WE'RE SO SQUARE WE GOT CORNERS!

Why?

We've got an eight-year old U.S. Marshal at our place, that's why.

"Whaddya say, Tiger," we proposed in Tacoma.

Shall we let of Dan Troop and Chester and Sugarfoot get it alone this summer?"

"We'll fish and hike and camp and play lots of ping pong. We won't miss TV at all, will we, Buddy?"

Comes the first night — the moment of truth:

"Hey, where's the TV here? I see that thing on the roof."

We remind him gently that we had agreed, "Don't you remember that we'd do without it this summer?"

Political Convention, BYU Style

Dr. Stewart Grow, Demo keynoter approves nominating speech for Democratic candidate.

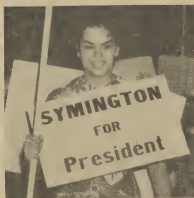

Demonstrations were plenty, especially on the Democratic side. Besides the two party total of six major candidates, there was also one sign which read "Wilkinson for President."

Dr. Richard Poll, gives keynote speech for Republican party. Dr. Poll's speech, of course, was a blast on Democrats.

Legation head casts vote during roll call of states.

Supporters of Missouri Senator, Stuart Symington parade around convention hall when name of Missouri politician was put into nomination.

Nixon, Johnson Selected

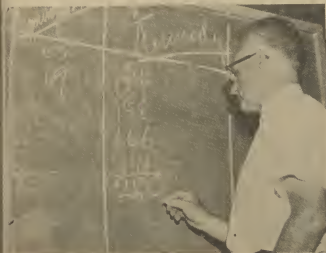

Mock political convention, BYU style, held July 12, complete with speeches and political razzle-dazzle, saw Vice-President Nixon and Senator Lyndon B. Johnson emerge as presidential aspirants.

Permanent Chairman Dr. John Bernhard was very believable. His physical charm and verbal fluency lent much to convention atmosphere.

Dr. Richard Poll, keynoter for the Republicans, played exactly the right tune when he stated, "The leader we offer, is not, in the vernacular, the twice rejected egghead, but leadership compounded upon under stress, Vice President Nixon . . ."

Democratic keynoter, Dr. Stewart L. Grow, extolled, "A side which favors the Democratic party is evident in the public opinion polls . . ."

It was the opinion of Brigham Young studentbody that Senator Lyndon B. Johnson was the man for the job.

Dr. Grow keeps running tally on Democratic nominees as students act as state delegations.

Frank Schmidt gives nominating speech for Senator Lyndon Johnson, who eventually won BYU Democratic Mock Convention Presidential nomination.

Salt Lake Bees Repeating Pattern That Resulted in 1959 PCL Pennant

by Ken Morrison
Universe Sports Editor
There is an old saying in baseball by the name of "the pennant race" on the fourth of July will win the pennant. The Salt Lake City Bees disproved that theory in the Pacific Coast League last year. They are following the same pattern this year.

ON JULY 4, 1959, the Bees were fifth place, six games behind the pace-setting Sacramento Solons. By July 14 they were still down in fourth place but in three games behind the Vancouver Mounties who had taken over first place. The Bees went on to win the 1959 pennant by one and a half games over the Mounties.

They are presently leading the league in team batting average. They are also far ahead in total home runs.

Five Bees are hitting .310 or higher in the latest Coast League statistics. Harry Bright is batting a .330 clip for second spot in the circuit in that department. Henry Mitchell is hitting .326; Sam Miley .324. Kenyan Toothman .312, and Jim Bauman .310.

BRIGHT is the league-leader in RBI's with 75. Classy first baseman R. C. (Real Cool) Stevens is second in RBI's with 64. Stevens is setting the pace in the home run department with a respectable 24 while Bright is second with 18.
